AUGUSTA
UNIVERSITY

MS Clinical and Translational Science

The Master of Clinical and Translational Science is designed to equip students with the necessary skills to become leaders in translational research efforts within their respective fields. Now more than ever, clinical investigators and health care professionals rely on a quantitative approach to performing not only research, but also methodologically sound decision making within their clinical domains. Our program integrates research study design with analysis and interpretation by providing education in clinical trials, observational studies, biostatistics, and epidemiology.
